

Home Inspector Course

Home inspectors are in high demand. Home buyers have realized just how important a home inspection is in making their investment work.

For

most first time home buyers, purchasing a new home is, perhaps, the most important investment they will ever make. Because of this, they are adamant about not making decisions without first ensuring that the decision is the right one. Home inspection is one of the only guarantees a home buyer has that they have made a good choice.

Home inspection

is a job that requires good business sense. Not only that, it requires specific technical skills and knowledge about construction. While some people set up a home inspection franchise without first knowing the basics of the job, the key to success is getting the necessary training and education.

A good home inspection school covers the following:

- * Landscaping and grading
- * Walls
- * Foundations
- * Roofs and roof-mounted structures
- * Lot improvements
- * Windows
- * Paved areas
- * Doors
- * Wood-destroying insects
- * Garages
- * Interior construction cover rooms
- * Basements
- * Attics
- * Crawl spaces
- * Utilities
- * Leakage
- * Insulation
- * Air conditioning
- * Plumbing
- * Heating
- * Electrical systems
- * Troubleshooting

Below are a few home inspector courses to consider if you are interested in pursuing a career in home inspection.

Professional Career Development Institute

This

course is designed to teach you how to conduct home inspections in newly purchased and newly constructed homes, town homes, condominiums, and other residential properties. Their home inspector course is nationally accredited and uses the distance e-learning method, which means it is completely home study.

Allied Home Inspection School

Knowing

that real estate inspection is a technical and complex field, the Allied Home Inspection School offers home-inspection-course programs designed to give you all the knowledge and skills you will need as a professional in the field. This course will teach you how to perform objective visual inspections of homes. Not only that, but you will also learn how to produce (for buyers and/or owners) a written report of the condition of the property. The function of the home inspector is two-fold, and in teaching you how to do these things, Allied Home Inspection School gives you the skills you need to do your job.
